Happy New Year

Today is the start of the Chinese New Year, the year of the Ox. Happy New Year to all our families who are celebrating. We wish a happy half term to everyone; enjoy a well earned break from home learning.

Well being

Being a good listener was the most prevalent act of kindness experienced by staff this week which goes to prove that it's always good to talk!

Ideas for half term;

The weirdly brilliant Senior Fish Curator's tour of the Natural History Museum's Tank room

Home Learning

We continue to be impressed with the engagement of the children with their home learning. We love the children's enthusiasm to share work but please could we request that responses to assignments are limited to one or two pieces (unless the teachers specify otherwise) so that marking is kept to a manageable level. Thank you!

This week Y5 took part in live debates on Teams. They had been working on structuring and delivering their arguments in their English lessons this week. They came up with amazing arguments and evidence for and against the motion 'Teachers and schools should be replaced with computers'. They really impressed their teachers, especially those that were having to think of arguments for the side they do not believe themselves.

Year 3 Stonehenge Artwork

Year 1 have been finding out about materials and their properties. They have also been learning about recycling and being more sustainable. Emily made this fabulous handbag with her grandma.

New Uniform

We are in the process of switching uniform suppliers. Details of how to order uniform will be shared with you shortly and posted on the website.
